Animal Instinct. A friend of mine saw two cats ap-proaching each other on the top of a board fence. There was no room for them to pass each other, and he wo dered what would happen. When they were near each other one of them stopped, turned around and retreated till it came to another board fence that joined at right angles the one they were on. The cat stepped off on this were on. The cat stepped off on this fence and waited there till the other went by. My friend thought this act showed an appreciation of the problem beyond the reach of instinct. No doubt those cats had met before, and one was magter of the other. What more natural than that the defeated cat should retreat before the superior and when it came to the other fence step off upon it and let the victor pass? The action involved no mental process any more than when two luert bodies in motion meet each other and one gives way. There was no other course open to the cat. If she or he had turned back and taken to the side fence solely to accommodate the other cat, why, that were another matter.

Old Roman Laws.

The old Roman laws, according to Colquboun, conferred on the husband complete empery over the wife. All she owned or earned was vested in him, and he acquired the same rights over her person and property as if she were his natural daughter. The wife, on the other hand, acquired all the rights to a child and to her busband's name and succession in the event of an intestate estate, and she could exer cise all the privileges to which her sex admitted. The power of the ancient Roman father over his offspring was originally perpetual, nor could the child be emancipated from the fa-ther's control during the father's life except by that parent's consent, nor did he become sui juris until the father (being himself sui juris) died, when the son was emancipated by the simple operation of the law. In those brave days the father had legal per mission to scourge his children or to send them, fettered like slaves, to work on his estate or even to kill then taking off he thought proper

"In 1816 no young English lady ventured to waltz. The Duke of Devon-shire returned from a tour in Germany and observed one evening at a large ball that a woman was never seen to better advantage than when waitzing. I do not know whether he was anx-jous to play a trick, but he repeated this gasertion several times. It was passed from mouth to mouth, and at the next ball all the young ladles were waitzing. The duke admired them waltzing. The duke admired them greatly, said that it was delightful and ave proper animation to a bail. He hen added carelessly that he, at any rate, had decided never to marry a lady who waitzed. It was to the Duchess of Richmond and at Carlton House that he saw fit to make this revelation. The poor duchess, the most clumsy of matchmaking mammas, near-ly fell off her chair with horror. She repeated the statement to her neighbors, who passed it on, and consterna-tion spread from seat to seat. The young ladies continued to waltz with clear consciences. The old ladies were furious, but the unfortunate dance was oncluded. Before the end of the evening the good Duchess of Richmond was able to announce that her daugh-ters felt an objection to waltzing which no persuasion of hers could ever overcome. Some few girls of more independence continued to waltz, but the Life Saving and Law. The Roumanians are as curious in some things as the Chinese. A girl who fell into the river and was swept down by the current finally seized bush on the bank and drew hersel to shore. The owner of the land on which the bush grew immediately claimed a reward of 4 shillings because his bush was there and had saved her. Her father refused to pay, and there was a lawsuit. What the law has to decide is whether drowning people can make use of bushes on the bank with-out paying for the same or whether the essistance of the said bush is worth a certain sum of money.

The Young Physician.

In the early sixties it was assually the duty of a practicing physician to ride many miles every day on his regular round of visits apon his patients. In those days a young man who had received a splendid medical training in one of the best medical colleges of that day was accustomed to ride ten, twenty, thirty miles for more visiting the sick and afflicted. His success was soon phenomenal. Doctors and families called him for consultation to towns at considerable distances by rail. His specialty was the cure of those common and distressing diseases of women. He had early discovered that by combining the extracts of the following medicinal plants, in just the right proportion, without the use of alcohol his Prescription a limost invariably cured such cases. Later, in order to place this remedy before the public in a shape easily to be procured, he established a laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., where regularly qualified chemists were put in charge to accurately prepare his "Prescription" and put it in shape for shipment to all parts of the world. This remedy, which he named Br. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a "patent medicine" but a tonic and nervine for women, and a regular physician's prescription, and contains the following in-gredients: Lady's Slipper root, Black
